What do ambitious businesses, growing leadership teams and organisations committed to raising their standards have in common?

They understand that sustainable success requires more than a great product or service. It requires strong foundations, capable people, effective operations and a commitment to doing things exceptionally well.

That's where Michelle Hoskin comes in.
Michelle has spent more than two decades helping businesses strengthen the way they operate, lead and grow. From financial and professional services to legal, construction and other operationally complex businesses, she works with leadership teams to create stronger structures, develop their people and embed operational excellence throughout their organisations.

Her expertise is underpinned by extensive involvement in the development of British and international best-practice standards. Michelle has served on committees responsible for shaping standards including ISO 22222 and BS 8577, bringing that depth of knowledge into the practical, real-world challenges faced by businesses today.

STANDARDS INTERNATIONAL®

MICHELLE HOSKIN

Consultant, Coach and Trainer

Her focus is simple: helping good businesses become exceptional ones - with the people, processes, standards and operational foundations to sustain their success.

From designing and embedding these standards to advising CEOs on how to scale sustainably without compromising culture, her work has redefined what 'best practice' really means in the profession.

Michelle is a sought-after speaker, author, and relentless champion for operational excellence, driven by a mission to help firms thrive from the inside out.

Now, she brings this experience to businesses like yours, helping scale growth, streamline operations, and create real momentum, as an ongoing strategic advisor, or specific projects.
